A beautiful unique rustic dresser unit, originates from a Hungarian village farmhouse. A very old piece, likely mid 19th century, and although primitive in construction it is very well built and made to last.

The dresser has open shelves with a wonderful old spoon rack to the top, a worktop area that has an additional honed slate insert (removable), leading to a narrow central door which opens to a large cupboard with two shelves each side.

A remarkable piece of authentic vernacular furniture of a bygone era, in very good sound condition, clean and ready for use. A characterful piece that would work in many different room settings including kitchen, bathroom, hallway or living area.
