About the designer

Hara's design philosophy emphasizes the importance of "emptiness" and finding beauty in simplicity. This ethos is beautifully embodied in the Suwari stool, which strips away unnecessary ornamentation to showcase the inherent elegance of the form.

As the art director for the Japanese design house Muji for many years, Hara has become renowned for his ability to imbue everyday objects with a sense of serenity and contemplation. The Suwari stool continues this tradition, serving as a meditation on the beauty of function and the calming power of thoughtful design.

Hara's deep appreciation for traditional Japanese culture and aesthetics can be seen in the Suwari's organic, flowing lines and minimalist silhouette. Yet the design also has a distinctly modern sensibility, blending timeless simplicity with a sculptural, almost art-like quality.

Like all of Hara's work, the Suwari kneeling stool is a masterful study in reduction - paring down the essential elements to their purest form. The result is a stunning piece of functional art that enriches any space with its serene, zen-inspired presence.

Whether you're using it for meditation, prayer, or simply as a captivating accent piece, the HIDA Sangyo Suwari Kneeling Legless Stool Chair embodies the design brilliance of Kenya Hara. It's a true testament to his ability to create objects that are both beautiful and deeply meaningful.
